

WASTE MANAGEMENT COMPANY OF THE YEAR

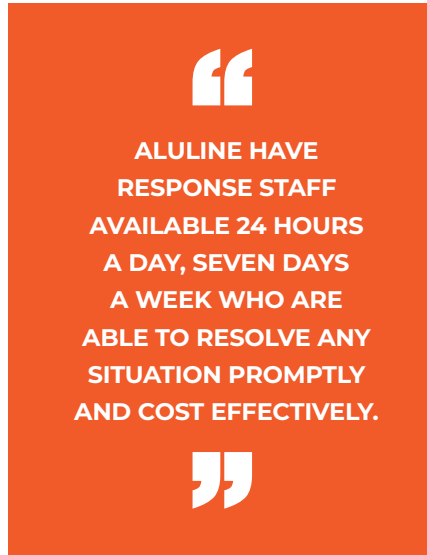

Aluline Portugal, Lda

PORTUGAL

With more than 30 years in the industry, Aluline is one of Portugal's premier companies dedicated to sustainable urban development and the environment. Director, William Clark, has led the business from the front and his commitment to a continuous development policy has allowed the experts to create new services and innovations which have benefited customers and the planet by protecting and improving the sustainability of our natural resources. Aluline offers a comprehensive selection of services which are all about cleaning up the world we live in – from lifting stations, septic tanks and grease separation cleaning provisions, to disposing of cooking oils clogs and inspecting CCTV footage of ongoing issues. The Seixal-based company has the experience you need to ensure your business or local authority is conducting itself in the most ecologically sound methods available today - protecting the generations of tomorrow.

State-of-the-art technologies

Aluline have always understand the importance of evolving technologies in their field and have made an effort to ensure they are always in front of the often momentous advances that change the way we manage our waste. The specialists not only adopt the most innovative approaches available on the market, but have also been a market leader in the creation of natural, green and sustainable solutions. Using biotechnology and waste-at-source removal equipment, Aluline designs exceptional solutions for ongoing problems that have been specifically devised to reduce or even eliminate the environmental impact of waste. Among other uses, ecologically-sound processes developed in-house help to remove food grease residues, which have most recently become one of the major waste issues of our time, and prevent the accumulation of these residues in drainage systems, sewers and treatment plants.

Comprehensive services

On top of their innate expertise of technological advances, Aluline offers a complete and integrated range of services that can be adapted according to individual business or personal circumstances. By providing flexibility across the work they undertake, the team is able to guarantee the right product and service solution for any and all problems. The waste management company has built a reputation for this personalised approach and have built an impressive portfolio of clients with household names – including Taco Bell, Hanami Sushi, Domino's Pizza, KFC and Pizza Hut – all who have benefited from their fully customised menu of services. Employing Aluline means customers can relax and feel secure that their waste management needs will be met quickly and efficiently, using first class equipment and processes such as aluzyme bioremediation, oil separators, retainer filters and top quality cleaning kits.

Judges' comments:

The judges were particularly impressed by the customer service on offer at Aluline, who go out of their way to ensure every encounter they have with their clients is a positive one. The technical specialists are always available, whenever their assistance is required, and in addition to the expert guidance they provide, they also have response staff available 24 hours a day, seven days a week who are able to resolve any situation promptly and succinctly. No matter what the waste issue is, Aluline are a reliable and trustworthy company who fix problems swiftly at incredibly competitive prices.
